EUROPEAN ARMILIS.

The Republique Française has published some curious statistics as to the cost of the various European armies, showing the percentage of its annual income expended by each of the great Powers on its army, the cust per head of population and the amount which each soldier costs per annum. France is credited with a standing army of about half a million men, each of whom cost £46 a year, the total expenditure being £23,500,000 sterling, or 21 per cent of the entire income; the cost per head of population is 12s, 10d per annum. The 422,000 soldiers of Germany cost £43 a year or about £18,000,-000-21 per cent of the national income, or 8s. 9d per head of population. Austria-Hungary pays £13.500,000 for 233,000 men, or £51 10s. a man; the army estimates absorb about 19 per cent. of the national income, and each inhabitant of the Empire pays about 7s. 11d. a year for military expenditure. Russia's 760,000 men cost £29,000,000, or £38 12s. per man; this expenditure represents 29 per cent. of the national income, and costs each Russian subject 6s. 6d. per annum. Italy, with a standing army of 204,000 men, pays £8,000,-000 a year, or 14 per cent. of her income; each soldier costing about £40 a year, and each Italian being called upon for 6s. 8d. for this purpose. The expenditure of England for military matters is somewhat overstated, and is divided into imperial and Indian expenditure. The army estimates for home and colonial armies are stated to be £19,000,000, instead of about £15,-000,500; the number of men is shown to be 135,000, instead of about 125,000, and thus the cost per man is shown to man is shown to be £140 a year, and the total expenditure to amount to 14 per cent. of the national income and to require 13s. a year from each British substated at £17,000,000 or about 25 per cent, of the income. The total strength is set down as 233,000 men and the cost per man as £73 a year.

The Wages of Farm Laborers.

The annual report of the statistician of the Agricultural Department gives interesting facts concerning farm labor and wages. In the Pacific and mining laborers, without board, range between $30 75 in Montana, and $24 50 in Washington Territory. Of the Northern States, east of the Missouri, Minnesota pays her farm laborers best, the wages with board being $16 33, while Vermont pays only $12 60. In the Southern States the prices paid range from $12 26 in Louisians, to $7 32 in South Carolina. The cost of subsisting the laborer for the average of the whole country, in 1880, is $7 18 a mouth, against $7 14 in 1879. The demand for laborers is good in all sections.

NEVADA'S NATURAL PHE-NOMENA.

[Egreka Lauder ] Nevada is a land of curious natura henomena. Her rivers have no visible outlet to the ocean. She has no lakes of any magnitude. She has vest atretches of alkali deserts, however, that give every indication of having been the beds or bottoms of either-seas or lake. Down in Lincoln county there is a spring of ice cold water that bubbles up over a rock, and disappears on the other side, and no one has been able to find where the water goes. At another point in the same county is a large spring about 20 feet square, that is, apparently, only some 18 or 26 inches in depth with a sandy bottom. The sand can be plainly seen, but on looking closer it is perceived that this sand is in ness of its tire. He therefore took it off and rolled it into the, as he thought shallow water. He never laid his eyes on that wagon wheel again. Our mountains are full of caves and caverns, many of which have never been explored to a great distance. rodeo was held last spring over in Huntington Valley. During its progress quite a number of cattle were missed and for a time unavailing seach was made for them. At last they were traced to the mouth of a natural tunnel or cave in the mountain. The herders entered the cave, and following it for a long distance, at last found the cattle. It

In Peru, South America, rain is un-known. The coast of Peru is within the region of perpetual southeast trade winds, and though the Peruvian shores are on the verge of the great South-Sea boiler, yet it never rains there. The reason is plain. The southeast trade winds in the Atlantic Ocean first strike the water on the coast of Africa. Travelling to the northwest, they blow obliquely across the ocean until they reach the coast of Brazil. By this time they are heavily laden with vapor. which they continue to bear along across the continent, depositing it as they go, and supplying with it the sources of the Rio de la Plata and the southern tributaries of the Amazon. Finally they reach the snow-capped Andes, and here is wrung from them the last particle of moisture that a very low temperature can extract. Reaching the summit of that range, they now tumble down as cool and dry winds on the Pacific slopes beyond. Meeting with no evaporating surface,

The Central Pacific Company's shipyard at West Oakland is at present the scene of great activity. The yard, which is the largest on the coast.—Mare Island Navy Yard excepted—is crowded with craft in the various stages of construction, from the keel on the stocks to the finished steamer, awaiting but to be launched, to begin its career of use-fulness. Of the two sister sidewheel steamers, now nearly completed, the Modos will be launched first, probably early next week. These steamers are each 180 feet keel by 43 feet beam, with 25 feet added, over all, and 9 feet depth of hold. The engines were made by the supervision and from the plans of A. J. Steavens. ## Emigration.

Railroad conductors inform us that honors are about easy between those leaving California for the East and those coming to this coast. From two to three cars-full of emigrants pass here daily for the East and the West.

No Tramps.

Nearly all the tramps have disappeared along the railroad. Whether the bot weather or an increasing demand for labor has caused them to stop traveling is not known.

We are the grateful recipients of some fine cherries which were raised on Allan Evans' ranch in Long Valley. If the frut laden branches received, are tair samples of those still drooping in the sun, what a beautiful night the trees must present. The cherries themselves, perfect in form, and radiant in coloring, need but to draw slightly from nature's sugar vault to make them absolutely fauttless.

and Louis Bellmere, and the close call Judge Webster and his boy had from a watery grave. On Saturday afternoon Cain and the two boys were rowed out on the lake by the man lently for more than an hour. Cain was out from shore about six miles. Webster was nearer the shore, and as soon as he saw the storm approaching pulled for the shore, and reached it, with only the loss of an oar and oar-locks. Cain also endeavored to get back to Watson's camp on shore, but a sudden squall capsized the boat, and Smidt and Arthur were drowned. Cain and the eldest boy held on to the boat, and for hours drifted along, until some time in the night they landed on a small island. There they remained until Sunday morning, when they tore off a piece of hoard from one side of the boat, and using it as an oar, tried to get back to the western shore. But they landed on the east side of the lake instead, and here they were found by a party which started out from Watson's in search of them, both being nearly exhausted. They were taken back to Watson's and cared for, and word sent in for Dr. Bergman, whose services might be needed, it was thought. Dr. Bergman returned yesterday afternoon. He reports that he found Cain and the boy Louis very sick, and expressed his surprise that Cain stood je3-60d the test. He says Cain told him that he felt twice like giving up but that each time the thought came to him that if he "quit," the boy would go too and so he kept up his courage until they were saved.
